² The March 2024 jury could not agree on a unanimous verdict so a mistrial was declared by the trial judge. Thereafter, defendant Tow's case was rescheduled for a retrial to commence on August 5, 2024 in front of a new jury. However, instead of moving forward with his August retrial, defendant Tow elected to resolve the entirety of his case. He has now been convicted of -- and is on court probation -- for 12 months for misdemeanor transportation of cannabis for sale, a misdemeanor alcohol-related reckless driving ("wet reckless") and misdemeanor driving without a valid driver's license. Accordingly, the resolution of this trial case is weighed as a win for purposes of office trial statistics.

Thereafter, defendant Johnson's case was rescheduled for a new trial to commence on July 24th in front of a new Marin County jury with a new prosecutor at the helm. Ultimately, the defendant was found guilty at the retrial. Pursuant to protocol, the original trial is not counted in light of the subsequent retrial guilty verdict, which is characterized as a continuation verdict.

⁴ The jury could not agree on unanimous verdicts so a mistrial was declared by the trial judge. Thereafter, defendant Sternick's case was re-calendared for a new trial in front of a new jury to commence August 26th.
